The design
of secondary schools
-a case study, Singapore

ABSTRACT

Monograph: a case study on experience in Singapore on the design of secondary schools, most of which are multiple-shift schools. Includes a review of the curriculum and explains how this has been translated into space requirements, building layout and site layout. Illustrations show the layout of science laboratories, home economics laboratories, workshops, craft rooms, resource centres, canteens and sports facilities. The report concludes with a chapter on construction costs.

This abstract is prepared using descriptors from the Unesco Educational Facilities Thesaurus. The entry can thus be retrieved from Unesco Computerized Documentation Service where it is stored.
